

In light of the recent events of proposed fining of Clear Channel Communications, I as a citizen of the United States of America am concerned. If such action is to take place due to changes in legislation or massive complaints, then it is my opinion that all areas and representatives of media should be held equally accountable to their actions. One particular episode of the Oprah Winfrey show that aired in March contained very sexually explicit content referring to varied forms of oral sex. This show airs in Minnesota right when our children are getting home from school, not in the morning during school hours or at night when these children are sleeping. In conclusion, even if I do understand why such legislation is in place I'm not one who supports the current elevation in fines. What we must be careful of is not to just target certain shows or entertainers. All those in media should be held accountable to the same standards and when they make errors in judgement should incur the same punishment/fines.
